

Dallington

Leaving Dallington School is the worst mistake anybody could ever make. There has never been a day when I have not wanted to go to school - because I enjoy it. Many schools push their students until they feel depressed and fed up. This school is unique. We are great fun and learn at the same time and, without feeling any tling of depression, I have flown through the 11⁺ and have cant many things, which have stuck in my sp memory.

I have found that if you enjoy what you learn and do, the knowledge sticks forever, but if you have a horrid, strict, boring teacher, every molecule of algebra or grammer, or ven manners, will go in one ear and out the other.

Dallington is just as academic as any other school, but the children are eased in to pressure and taught to be ndependant and happy, yet bright.

I have made some amazing, loyal friends who I will never forget. I now feel as if I have two families, one being my mum, dad and brother and one being the children and teachers at Dallington School.
